2. Claims 1-6 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Wiegerinck (USPN 5405324). Wiegerinck discloses an implantation device, comprising of a hollow needle and a body adjoining the needle, the body comprising an elongated part extending along the same axis as the needle, a plunger that can be displaced within the elongated part and the needle, the periphery of the plunger defining a channel in the elongated part and a chamber capable of holding an implant characterized in that the chamber is positioned radially outside the channel and has a directly or indirectly open connection to the channel, the plunger being capable of closing off and opening up the chamber by being displaced, as well as where the implantation device has a chamfered tip and where the plunger has a chamfered tip profile capable of blending with the needle tip profile. Wiegerinck also teaches being able to use a hormonal implant to be injected with the apparatus, and where the implant is held in the chamber. (Fig 1, 2, 3, column 1, 2, and 3).
